Humans used camels as means of transportation for thousands of years ago. They used them for the long journeys in the hot and dry deserts. Camels are <a href="https://doi.org/10.1001/journeys-1

There are two kinds of camels; The Arabian Camels and The Bactrian Camels. The Arabian Camel lives in the very hot deserts of North Africa and the Middle East. The Bactrian camel is found in the rocky deserts of Asia that get very hot and very cold.

Camel's hump contains water and that's the reason behind their long travels without anything to drink. It can go without water for three or four days. It also can go through wind and sand storms. It is well adapted to desert life
